

Guiseppe (Joey) lives in Aliano	Calabrian holidays are being heavily marketed now.	Grandpa's house is large but old-fashioned.
Summers are hot Winters can be bitterly cold	EU grants to Southern Italy are a major part of life in Aliano	There is a primary school in Aliano
Modern "Starter-homes" now available in Aliano.	Grandpa is keen on operas by Verdi - especially 'La Traviata'	Joey loves birdwatching. Migration time is a lovely time for him in Aliano.
Earthquakes restrict further growth in the hilltop towns.	He lives with Grandpa, 76 years of age.	People are getting richer in Aliano.
Guiseppe has 5 uncles, 3 grandparents and a Godfather.	Joey met a young blonde at college. She works in Milan these days.	Joey can handle a shotgun with ease.
You can't beat those peaceful sunsets over the mountains.	Only the elderly seem to be farmers these days.	Many people in Aliano are over 55 years old.
Joey went to college in Brindisi. He is a qualified car mechanic.	Fiat are looking for workers in Turin.	EU grants have meant there are more small tractors around.
There is no shortage of part time work for younger people in Aliano.	15 cousins live nearby in Aliano. Joey loves big family get togethers.	Mosquitoes still plague the river valleys.
Aliano is high in the Appennine mountains.	Northern Italians are not quite the same somehow!	Torrential winter rain erodes soil.
Joey's girlfriend in Milan can afford the latest fashions.	Coastal oil refineries spoil the look of the nearby bay.	Why did they build that Autostrada (motorway)? It is empty.